

On The Science Channel they have been running a commercial offering "free CDs" by Video Professor that says they are overstocked and need to make room. First, the ad is phoney. When you call they are selling CDs. Second, it is HIGHLY UNLIKELY that a legitimate company would spend huge advertising dollars to give away free software. If they need more room, they can either return the CDs to the supplier, donate them, or throw them out. This ad is phoney and you should do something about it. I tried to complain to The Science Channel or Discovery Channel, but their website does not provide any way to contact them.
